When Jesus asks James and John, “What do you wish me to do for you?” they could have responded some other way. They could have asked him to tell them what they could do for him. They could have asked him how they could prevent him from being put to death (which he had told them about three times now). But instead, they asked him for a prominent place in heaven. Do we sometimes do what Jesus wishes just so that we will be rewarded by someone? Or so we will more likely be rewarded by going to heaven? Or, rather, do we do what Jesus wishes because it’s the right thing for us to do?

World Mission Sunday is a reminder to each one of us that we all participate in the Christian mission by virtue of our baptism. In baptism, we (or our parents on our behalf) promised to follow Christ and to put our faith into practice. There may be no better way to put our faith into practice than by carrying out the mission of the Church. World Mission Sunday is also an opportunity to build solidarity through works and prayer with both missionaries and the people they serve.

Throughout his Gospel, Saint Mark emphasized how difficult it was for the disciples to truly understand Jesus and his mission. Jesus had just told them for the third time that he would be arrested, put to death, then rise on the third day. So, what do James and John do? They ask him for a special place in the kingdom. The others get indignant, but is it just because they thought of it first? Therefore, Jesus repeats what he did back at the beginning. “Jesus summoned them,” Mark writes, calling them to discipleship all over again, but this time immediately explaining to them that being a disciple means being the servant of all. Looking at my life right now, how is Jesus summoning me? How can I be of service in my family, my parish, my community?
