Clyde St. Mary Catholic Church

“All the people were weeping as they heard the words of the law. The reaction to hearing God’s law read publicly may seem extreme to us, but to the Israelites the law was foundational to their life. It was not so much a list of rules, but a way to live in concert with God’s will. Note that this scene occurs soon after they were allowed to return to Jerusalem after fifty or more years in exile. During that long time many had wandered from the faith or forgotten the law. Remember, they did not have copies of the Torah at home; the printing press had not been invented yet, let alone the internet. Only when they heard it proclaimed by the priest Ezra did they realize how far they had fallen from the terms and the promise of the covenant. They wept in remorse.

Ezra and Nehemiah could have responded to the people’s remorse with fire and brimstone. But instead they consoled them. They focused on the present, not the past. “Today is holy to the LORD your God. Do not be sad,” they insisted. Now they were back in the holy city. Now they could gather together freely. Now they all had access to the word of God and the law. The covenant yet held.

Centuries later, Jesus reads Isaiah’s calling and reinterprets it as his mission. He himself will fulfill all these things, bringing the Good News to those in need, freedom for those held captive by sin, healing to the sick and disabled, and a jubilee year for all. A jubilee year was a radical reversal of society, with slaves freed, debts forgiven, and property redistributed. The people and the land, after all, belong ultimately to the Lord. Jesus claims us for his own, so we are brothers and sisters in Christ. Jesus calls us to share what we have with those in need, for they are our family members. During this Jubilee Year of Hope, let us live in the hope that Jesus’ mission continues to be fulfilled in our world today. How do I apply the word of God in my life? Can I commit to spending time each day this week reading from the Bible?
